Ligon High graduates donate $500 to Saint Augustine's College

Raleigh – Ligon High School's class of 1966 is using its resources to help local historically black colleges and universities (HBCUs). The alumni of the former school began their effort with a $500 donation to Saint Augustine's College. Orrin Haywood Jr., president of the reunion class, and Brenda Moore, treasurer, presented the check to Dr. Kim Luckes, executive vice president of Saint Augustine's College.

"We primarily wanted to help the HBCUs in this area since we are graduates of Ligon High School in this area," Haywood said.

Haywood and Moore appealed to their own class for the initial donation, but plan to challenge other Ligon alumni to get involved. "They were very excited about it when we did the presentation in July," Moore said.

"Since they were so excited, we're going to challenge them to donate as well," Haywood added.

The Ligon class of 1966 also presented a donation to Shaw University.
