

Re'Shae N. Green grew up in beautiful Prince George's County, Maryland. Faith, family, and friends are the important life pillars that govern Re'Shae's life. When she isn't spending time with her friends and family, she wears the hat of a girl boss as the co-founder of two service-based organizations. Re'Shae leads Stay Blessed LLC, a public relations company, and It's a Girl's Life, a nonprofit organization dedicated to women's empowerment through programs that focus on uplifting youth and spreading wisdom through mentorship. Re'Shae is also an English language arts teacher in Washington, DC. In her educational role, she teaches middle schoolers.

Emmel Zealous: Hip-Hop Dreams is Re'Shae's first children's book. She was inspired to write this book after struggling with anxiety disorder as both a child and an adult. She hopes to help today's youth face, manage, and overcome their struggles with anxiety, just as she did.

Named after Re'Shae's late grandmothers Emma and Melva, Emmel has a story meant to inspire and encourage young girls and boys to go after their dreams, no matter how big they may seem. This project is the first of many books she plans to write to support children who struggle with anxiety disorder. Her overall mission is to give them hope and simply remind them that they can.
